

construction be strong enough to hold the weight? We deem marriage to be a life-long commitment towards each other. It is the institution which brings forth the future generations of a nation.

As a married couple you are bound by law and tradition to stay together in the event of an issue within the family and work hard together to solve it. But, in a relationship where the couple is just testing compatibility, such commitment and sense of responsibility cannot be expected.

In such a relationship you are just a man and a woman, waiting to walk away in the face of the slightest issue. Therefore, all couples who think it is trendy to move in together before marriage, should think about the unfavorable results it may trigger, both at personal and social level. In fact, living together can be regarded as a parasitic cancer which is destroying our social structure breeding social contention.
